Project Summary

The main idea of the MIGIEUS Module is linked with the situation at the 21 century in the Europe, where international migration and country's security and defence are valid research issues, and its proper scientific analysis requires inter- and multidisciplinary approach. The MIGIEUS topics are still underestimated and underrepresented in teaching and research, therefore it is an important niche to identify and develop them; to awakening students' observation skills and sensitivity to the problems of international migrations, their multidimensional causes and consequences for contemporary societies in terms of EU security and defence. The proposed MIGIEUS Module is planned as a 3-year coherent short teaching programme at IRIM. Two new courses "Migration as a security challenge in EU" and "EU foreign, security and defense policy" with teaching activities at its core, together with an innovative curriculum, corresponding to up-to-date research activities performed simultaneously, will be prepared and offered within the project in order to reach at least 60 Master degree students during 180 hours within 3 years. Courses will be delivered in the Romanian and Russian languages, with utilizing case studies, games, reports, discussions, participation of practitioners. There will be organized following events: 6 roundtable debates with 180 students from IRIM, other universities and colleges; offered open educational and scientific resources on EU policies and integration to beneficiaries; the participation of module's professors at dissemination, communication and information events and deliverables with academic publications articles/papers) and didactic materials (2 course textbooks) to ensure the project's multidimensional and consistent implementation, effective impact and long-lasting effects' multiplication.
